► MISSION STATEMENT

The KU Multicultural Scholars Program (MSP) recruits undergraduates from underrepresented backgrounds as a means of increasing the diversity of our student body. MSP scholars join a community of students and academic professionals, including administrators and professors. Program directors serve as primary contacts to help students address the academic, social, personal, and career aspects of their university experience.

► ELIGIBILITY

The program is open to undergraduates from underrepresented groups, e.g., African-, Asian-, Hispanic-, and Native-Americans, first-generation college students, or those with high financial need as defined by Pell Grant eligibility. Applicants must be U.S. citizens or have U.S. permanent resident status.

► APPLICATION

Our application process is online at msp.ku.edu. Follow directions under the desired program's tab. Guidelines vary slightly among programs, but typically require a cover letter, transcript, and essay.
